USE OF ARMS BY THE POLICE.

C.O. $\frac{14}{1007}$.—In accordance with the provisions of Section 9 of the Police Act, 1892, the Honourable the Minister has been pleased to cancel Regulations 460 to 474 inclusive, and to approve the following instructions relating to the use of arms by the Police in lieu thereof for general guidance:—

“The attention of all members of the Force is directed to Section 231 of the Criminal Code Act, 1902, the provisions of which must be strictly adhered to.

“The section materially alters the law relating to the use of arms by the police, and it is now only in cases where the person sought to be arrested is reasonably suspected of having committed an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life under the Code, and has first been called upon to surrender, that a constable would be justified in using a firearm, or any other force intended or likely to cause death or grievous bodily harm.

“However, there is still no doubt that where an offender himself turns a deadly weapon against a constable with the intention of taking life, the latter would be justified in using a firearm.

“Under Section 74 of the Prisons Act, 1903, a police officer charged with the custody of any person under sentence of death or penal servitude or imprisonment for any term may fire upon any such prisoner while attempting to escape from any prison or other place, or while attempting to assault any guard, gaoler, warder, police officer, or other person as aforesaid, or any other prisoner, provided that such firing shall appear to be necessary to prevent the escape of such prisoner, or the assault committed or attempted by such prisoner was of a character apparently dangerous to the life or likely to cause bodily harm to the person assaulted or threatened.

“A safe rule for all occasions is to maintain a cool demeanour, to avoid threatening, and, when extreme necessity arises, to act with promptness and determination.”

FRED HARE,
Commissioner of Police.
